WHY THIS MATTERS

In the Thar Desert, a girl's schooling is still the exception.

Jaisalmer is India's largest district by area, and one of its driest. Female literacy here stands at just 32%, less than half the male rate. Across the district, roughly one in five girls drops out of school for household work or early marriage, most around age thirteen or fourteen. Rajkumari Ratnavati Girls' School was built to change that story, and today more than 230 girls walk through its gates each morning, many the first women in their families ever to attend school.

THE FULL SPONSORSHIP

What a year of school costs, and gives, one girl.

Education is never truly free; someone always meets its cost. For a girl at Rajkumari Ratnavati, that cost covers four essentials, her classroom, her journey to and from it, her uniform, and the meal that keeps her fed and focused. Sponsoring a child means meeting all four, for one full academic year.

Rs. 24,000 Education Tuition, trained teachers, books and everyday classroom learning.	Rs. 5,000 Transport Safe daily travel between her village and school, and back home.
Rs. 1800 School Dress A uniform that gives her dignity and a sense of belonging.	Rs. 1200 Midday Meal A nutritious, hot meal on every single school day of the year.

Your turn.

Somewhere in Jaisalmer this morning, a girl is deciding whether school is still worth it. What you give here does not just pay for books and a bus ride, it becomes the reason she keeps walking through our gates. Choose a gift from this brochure, and we will tell you exactly which girl, or which classroom, it has helped.
